

The Mariner of St Malo

Jacques Cartier grew up as a sailor, married well and became an agent of exploration for King Francis I of France. In April, 1534, he sailed for the New World. Before sailing, his men took an oath that they would behave themselves truly and faithfully in the service of the Most Christian King. Jacques name was made immortal by the faithfulness with which he and his men carried out that oath.

At the waist, on the left side, hangs a sword, and, on the right, close to the belt, the dirk or poniard of the period.
